Quarterly Commentary as at March 31, 2019

All of the Fund's three holdings had a positive impact on performance, led by the RBC Emerging Markets Equity Fund.

Emerging-market equities staged a strong recovery in the first quarter of 2019, following a challenging 2018. China continued to be a key driver of performance, with stock markets in Shanghai and Shenzhen both up more than 30% during the period. Colombia was another top performer, rebounding strongly from last year, while Turkey was one of the few emerging markets to decline. Following a recovery in January, Turkey's equity and currency markets weakened on concerns related to President Erdogan's unorthodox approach to managing the economy.

The biggest contributor to returns was Softbank, whose shares strengthened after the company announced a US$5.5 billion share buyback. Shares of the Asian insurer AIA Group appreciated amid a broader recovery in Asian equity markets and was also bolstered by business growth in China. All sectors delivered a positive return over the quarter.

Returns were negatively affected by the sale of a stake in Alibaba, whose shares rebounded with other Chinese technology stocks. The decision to eliminate the holding in Alibaba was based on concerns regarding its corporate-governance and accounting practices. The share price of JSE Ltd., which owns the South African stock exchange, declined alongside broader weakness in the local equity market given South Africa's challenging political and macroeconomic environments. Returns were also negatively affected by a drop in the shares of Marico, an Indian consumer-goods company.
