Quarterly Commentary as at March 31, 2017

RBC Retirement Income Solution was launched on October 11, 2016. Investment performance is not provided for a fund that has been available for less than one year.

Leading economic indicators are at their best levels in several years, economic surprises have been overwhelmingly positive and profits continue to recover. As a result, risk assets have performed well, and long-term expected returns for stocks remain attractive. We continue to believe that bond yields will move gradually higher over time, but any near-term adjustment will likely be limited given the amount of monetary stimulus that is still in place, as well as the slow-growth environment. Longer term, as unorthodox monetary policy fades, yields will again be driven by economic conditions such as inflation and economic growth, which our models suggest could lead to higher bond yields.

We don't think that equity market valuations are as stretched as some investors believe once you factor in current levels of inflation, interest rates and corporate profitability. However, we do recognize that stocks are not as cheap as they were, so a continued improvement in earnings is needed to fuel further equity gains. Fortunately, a recovery in profits is well underway. In fact, S&P 500 earnings exceeded analysts' forecasts in the fourth quarter and now appear to be accelerating. While there are risks that some of Trump's protectionist policies could have a negative impact on earnings, significant gains are also possible if large-scale corporate-tax cuts materialize and the economy accelerates.
