Quarterly Commentary as at December 31, 2017

Asian markets continued to post robust gains during the fourth quarter of 2017, extending the strong performance seen in the first three quarters of the year. Equity markets across Asia benefited from an upswing in global economic data and solid regional economic performance, particularly in China. During the quarter, the strongest-performing markets in the Asian region were China, South Korea and Australia. At the sector level, Information Technology and Financials outperformed while Utilities and Telecommunication Services lagged.

The allocations to Japanese equities and to Asian equities excluding Japan both had a positive impact on the Fund's performance. The Asia ex-Japan segment contributed the most to returns.

The backdrop for Asian economies remains constructive, although geopolitical risks such as North Korea remain. While expectations that the U.S. Federal Reserve will raise interest rates and shrink its balance sheet may lead to short-term volatility, Asian economies remain in decent shape amid strong consumption and supportive government policies. Provided inflation in Asia remains low, governments can continue to maintain favorable monetary conditions. As for Japan, we expect Prime Minister Abe and Bank of Japan Governor Kuroda to continue implementing accommodative fiscal and monetary policies. While unemployment is running near the lowest levels seen in 20 years, wage growth remains disappointing.
