

RBC Canadian Dividend Fund

Investment Objective

To achieve long-term total returns consisting of regular dividend income, which benefits from the preferential tax treatment given to dividend income, and modest long-term capital growth. The fund invests primarily in common and preferred shares of major Canadian companies with above average dividend yields.

Quarterly Commentary as at March 31, 2017

The S&P/TSX Composite Index hit an all-time high in the most recent quarter, after it was among the best-performing global equity markets in 2016. Notwithstanding this strength, it lagged the S&P 500 Index in the latest three months.

The top performing sector was Utilities, a reversal of the previous quarter's strength in cyclical sectors. The Fund enjoyed strong performance, due to an overweight in the sector and strong security selection. ATCO's quarterly earnings beat consensus estimates, with a higher-than-forecasted contribution from Canadian Utilities (a member of the ATCO Group). Brookfield Infrastructure Partners' stock price increased on strong cash reserves, large undrawn credit facilities, and a plan to monetize $1.5-$2.0 billion to deploy into new investments.

The Fund also had strong performance in Financials, due to an overweight in the sector and strong security selection. Banks experienced some weakness as allegations over aggressive sales practices surfaced, but still generated positive returns. An overweight position in banks, alongside an overweight in Brookfield Asset Management, boosted performance.

Energy dragged down index performance due to weak oil prices. Concern about OPEC compliance and rising rig counts contributed to the weakness. Seasonally weaker demand also did not help to ease investor uneasiness in a volatile sector. A slight overweight detracted from performance, however, we continue to believe in companies with strong, sustainable balance sheets and healthy levels of free cash flow.

Leading economic indicators are at their best levels in several years, economic surprises have been positive and corporate earnings continue to recover. Taken together, global economic signals remain quite strong.
