Quarterly Commentary as at December 31, 2018

The S&P/TSX Composite Index lagged many global markets through the fourth quarter as a result of Canadian-specific headwinds such as falling energy prices, competitiveness concerns, a cooler housing market and trade uncertainty.

Throughout the quarter, relative performance of the Fund benefited from both asset weighting and security selection. In this regard, the Fund benefited from its overweight position in Kirkland Lake Gold within the Materials sector. With gold reasserting itself as a safe haven asset through the volatile quarter, the company's solid performance, combined with a willingness to return capital to shareholders, resulted in strong share price gains. In addition, the Fund benefited from an overweight position in Thomson Reuters within the Financials sector with its shares advancing after buying back a material amount of stock and shifting focus towards its legal and tax units after selling a portion of its financial services unit to Blackstone.

Conversely, the headwinds facing the Canadian Energy sector were reflected in the Fund through its overweight position in PrairieSky Royalty. The company's share price slid amidst a tough environment for Western Canadian oil exploration and production businesses, from whom the firm collects royalties for the use of its land.

While the Canadian economy continues to expand, we expect a deceleration in 2019. Our GDP growth forecast for 2019 is below consensus, but nevertheless represents a slight increase from prior estimates thanks to the tentative resolution of NAFTA renegotiations. Economic competitiveness remains a cause for concerns because Canada's tax rates, along with its regulatory and environmental framework are seen as less business-friendly than the U.S. The federal government's recent decision to allow accelerated depreciation may help level the playing field.
