Quarterly Commentary as at March 31, 2018

Uncertainty returned to financial markets in early 2018 following a long period of strong returns and minimal volatility that lasted for most of the fiscal year. The reversal started with strong U.S. wage-growth data, which led to concerns that higher inflation may force the U.S. Federal Reserve to increase interest rates at a faster pace than previously anticipated. With markets beginning to find their feet in the latter stages of February, renewed concerns over U.S. trade protectionism resulted in additional volatility.

The valuation of the S&P/TSX is currently around two multiple points lower than the S&P 500, a gap that seems justified, given the concerns outlined above and the fact that the Financials and Energy sectors account for more than half of the Canadian market's earnings.

Security selection in Energy and Health Care drove returns this quarter. An overweight in Parkland

Fuel Corp. and U.S. position UnitedHealth Group Inc. contributed positively. On the negative side, Technology and Financials detracted from both an asset-weighting and security-selection perspective. With an overweight position in Element Fleet Management Corp., concerns about the 19th Capital Inc. joint venture weighed on the company's stock price, which also detracted from performance.

The economic backdrop remains positive by post-crisis standards as many of the macroeconomic indicators monitored by the portfolio manager show reasons to remain positive. While key risks of an aging business cycle, rising interest rates and protectionism persist, upside potential remains from structural reforms in Japan and U.S. fiscal stimulus. On balance, the portfolio manager expects the positives to outweigh the negatives, further driving potential in the stock market.
