Quarterly Commentary as at March 31, 2017

The S&P/TSX Composite Index hit an all-time high in the most recent quarter.

The Fund lagged the index in general, primarily due to the underweight positioning in the Materials sector, particularly in respect to mining and gold companies as they performed well during the quarter.

The top performing sector was Utilities as the market experienced a rotation from cyclical securities into more traditionally defensive areas. The Fund benefitted from an overweight in the sector and strong security selection. An overweight position in Algonquin Power benefitted the Fund as the company completed its acquisition of Empire District Electric and boosted its dividend.

Energy dragged down index performance due to weak oil prices. Concern about OPEC compliance discipline and rising rig counts in the U.S. contributed to the weakness. Seasonally weaker demand also did not help to ease investor uneasiness in a volatile sector. Security selection within the Energy sector benefitted the Portfolio with overweight positions in defensive mid-stream pipeline companies, where much of the weakness came from the oil companies.

Consumer Discretionary saw strong performance during the quarter. The Fund lagged the sector due to security selection, largely through the exclusion of Canadian Tire. We currently find the company to be relatively expensive.

Leading economic indicators are at their best levels in several years, economic surprises have been overwhelmingly positive and corporate earnings continue to recover from their prior stumbles. Taken together, global economic signals remain quite strong by post-crisis standards.

For the S&P/TSX Composite Index, estimates for 2017 earnings are now about $914 and the early read on 2018 is near $1,040. These forecasts are a considerable uptick versus 2016 and reflect returns on equity for the index that are consistent with the longer-term average.
