Quarterly Commentary as at March 31, 2019

Headwinds from protectionism, fading fiscal stimulus and less favourable financial conditions continued to weigh on the global economic expansion in the first quarter. The negative impact of these trends was offset somewhat by optimism that the U.S. and China would reach an agreement to end the current cycle of trade sanctions between the countries.

The Fund's overweight position in equities and underweight position in fixed income had a positive impact on performance. Bond yields fell sharply in most major markets during the period as slowing growth led to expectations that major central banks would halt interest-rate increases. Canadian bonds outperformed their U.S. counterparts given the slower pace of economic growth in Canada. Returns were bolstered by exposure to the Phillips, Hager & North Total Return Bond Fund, the RBC Global High Yield Bond Fund and the RBC Global Corporate Bond Fund.

Global equities posted double-digit returns during the period, driven in part by the more attractive valuations that followed a steep decline in equities in the fourth quarter of 2018. Emerging markets lagged developed markets, which rebounded more strongly from the late-year losses. The Fund benefited from exposure to all global equity regions, with North American stocks contributing the most to returns.

We remain underweight fixed income because, in our view, total returns for sovereign bonds are likely to be low or even slightly negative for an extended period. Even after the strong rally since the start of 2019, equities offer superior upside potential relative to bonds. Our models suggest stocks can deliver further gains as long as earnings continue growing as analysts expect. Balancing the risks and opportunities, we feel that maintaining modest overweight exposure to equities is appropriate.
