Quarterly Commentary as at September 30, 2017

During Q3, an overweight exposure to Momentum was the largest contributor to returns. An underweight allocation to the Size factor aided performance. Overweight allocations to the Value and Yield factors were the largest detractors from returns. The strategy screens out the most poorly ranked names through Earnings Quality, Financial Strength, and Earnings Growth. The performance of these quality themes detracted in aggregate from returns for Q3.

Many of companies leading the market so far in 2017 have had characteristics that we actively avoid. Expensive Momentum names like Biotechnology have outperformed the market by large margins. Names with strong balance sheets (Financial Strength) and least aggressive accounting (Earnings Quality) have also underperformed. These conditions continued to create headwinds in Q3 but, unlike the first half of the year, they were offset by the strong performance of momentum.

Overall allocation effects detracted from returns while security selection effects contributed to returns for Q3. Underweight allocations to Health Care and Real Estate contributed to returns while underweight allocations to Industrials and Telecommunication Services detracted. Security selection within Information Technology, Industrials, Consumer Staples, and Consumer Discretionary contributed to performance while security selection within Health Care and Financials detracted.

It is the policy of the Fund to maintain currency hedges at all times in order to neutralize exchange-rate movements between the U.S. dollar and the Canadian dollar. This policy had a positive effect on returns during the period.

Above all else, we believe that long-term success comes from building a Fund around proven stock selection factors—measured using key selection criteria like quality, valuation, and momentum. Based on these key themes, the strategy is very well positioned versus its benchmark and relative to the overall market. The Fund's companies have higher momentum, lower debt ratios, and trade at deep discounts across a number of valuation factors. They are also less dilutive and returning capital to shareholders by buying back shares.
