Quarterly Commentary as at December 31, 2018

Economic growth decelerated as 2018 came to a close, leading to declines in stocks and corporate bonds in the fourth quarter. Other issues clouding the outlook for investors included the U.S.-China trade conflict, the terms of the U.K.'s exit from the European Union and tightening financial conditions.

The Fund's overweight position in equities and underweight position in fixed income had a negative impact on performance. The U.S. Federal Reserve (Fed) raised its benchmark interest rate in December, the fourth increase in 2018. However, government-bond yields declined on concern about the outlook for growth. Japanese and European bonds performed best, followed by Canadian and U.S. fixed income. Returns in the fixed-income segment of the portfolio were boosted by the Phillips, Hager & North Total Return Bond Fund and the RBC Bond Fund.

Equities in developed markets in Europe and Asia, as well as in emerging markets, continued to decline in the fourth quarter. U.S. stocks, resilient for most of 2018, experienced fourth-quarter declines that were among the steepest in global markets and wiped out gains achieved during the first three quarters of the year. Returns were held back by the RBC Canadian Equity Income Fund and the RBC U.S. Dividend Fund.

We expect the trend of slowing global growth to continue into 2019. That said, further gradual tightening of monetary policy is expected, and rising rates could limit bond returns. The portfolio manager remains underweight fixed income, but used last year's rise in yields to increase the bond allocation as bonds can provide a cushion in an economic downturn. While we expect equity-market volatility to continue, stocks still offer superior return potential versus bonds, as long as earnings continue to grow as analysts expect. The Fund remains overweight equities, but exposure remains well below the peak earlier in the cycle.
