Quarterly Commentary as at March 31, 2017

Global economic growth firmed, with a pickup in the Eurozone starting to factor into the expansion. In March, the U.S. Federal Reserve boosted its benchmark interest rate for the second time in three months, reflecting optimism about the expansion. However, longer-term U.S. bond yields fell late in the period on concern that President Trump might have trouble winning approval for his proposed economic reforms.

The Fund's overweight position in equities and underweight position in fixed income had a positive impact on performance. Canadian, U.S. and U.K. bonds posted gains, while the improved outlook for the Eurozone resulted in losses for the region's government bonds. Fixed-income returns were aided by the RBC Bond Fund, the PH&N Total Return Bond Fund and the RBC Global High Yield Bond Fund.

Major equity markets rose, led by Europe and emerging markets, amid optimism that economies around the world were gathering momentum. Equity investments that added to returns included the RBC Emerging Markets Dividend Fund, the RBC U.S. Dividend Fund and the RBC Canadian Equity Income Fund.

Leading economic indicators are at their best levels in several years, economic surprises have been overwhelmingly positive and profits continue to recover. As a result, risk assets have performed well. We expect bond yields to rise, resulting in low or potentially negative returns over the years ahead, and we therefore remain underweight bonds. Long-term expected returns for stocks are more attractive, accounting for our equity overweight. In the near term, however, uncertainty surrounding U.S. public policy and a variety of style and technical factors have led us to reduce our exposure to stocks, where we remain overweight, but a little less so than before.
