Quarterly Commentary as at December 31, 2018

The largest contributor to relative performance this quarter was our holding in Indian financial HDFC, Bank, whose stock rose by nearly 10% over the quarter on perceived margin expansion in 2019 together with a relatively resilient Indian equity market. U.S.-domiciled financial trading platform MarketAxess appreciated after third-quarter earnings came in ahead of expectations and our holding in Swiss pharmaceutical giant Roche reported third-quarter sales results that beat all expectations.

The largest detractor from relative performance in the fourth quarter was our holding in U.S. early-stage lender SVB. SVB, which sold off after management suggested that the rate of loan growth would slow temporarily into 2019. Our holdings in German postal and logistics group Deutsche Post DHL and U.S.-domiciled global online retailer Amazon also detracted. Deutsche Post's share price declined on softer third-quarter earnings and concerns of a slowdown in global trade. Amazon fell together with the I.T. sector overall, largely due to concerns about slowing growth in earnings.

In the fourth quarter of 2018, it appeared that the decade-long period of monetary stimulus and benign-rate conditions was coming to an end. An uncertain political environment of trade wars and populist politics led to significant negative returns for equities globally. The U.S. Federal Reserve Board was clear about its intent to raise interest rates steadily, U.S.-China tensions rumbled on and seem unlikely to conclude any time soon, and Europe's polarising political landscape persisted. China has internal indebtedness issues and a slowing economy, and many emerging markets have suffered from a strong U.S. dollar, rising U.S. interest rates and elevated oil prices.

As always, the RBC Global Equity team remains committed to discovering companies that we believe will become future success stories. We are constantly searching for compelling long-term opportunities at the right valuations, while avoiding those businesses that are overvalued or that seem cheap but in fact are fundamentally flawed.
