Quarterly Commentary as at September 30, 2018

The S&P 1500 Index returned 5.5% over the quarter in Canadian dollar terms, with eight of eleven sectors performing positively. The Health Care sector posted double-digit returns, with momentum driven by better-than-expected earnings reports over the period. Defensive sectors performed well in general as investors sought out safer investments in the later stages of the cycle. At the other end of the spectrum, the Materials sector detracted the most from returns as commodity prices such as copper, gold, and silver were depressed due to the strengthening of the U. S. dollar over the quarter.

Within the Fund, Health Care and Information Technology were the strongest-performing sectors. Pfizer appreciated on the back of strong quarterly results. Accounting and tax software company Intuit continues to grow its revenue base and number of online subscribers to its flagship product, QuickBooks, and has been the best-performing stock over the last 12 months.

The largest detractor from performance during Q3 was Consolidated Edison. The company's share price has depreciated year to date on account of a slightly reduced revenue base, despite posting financial results that are in line with expectations. Given the weakness in gold and other commodity prices over the quarter, Royal Gold and Newmont Mining also detracted from performance.

Recent economic headlines have been dominated by U.S. protectionism and the potential for escalating tariff conflicts. This year's uptick in volatility has been caused in part by increasing global bond yields, and emerging markets have experienced especially sharp declines, hindered by U.S. dollar strength. With the Brexit deadline six months away, there is still no exit agreement in place between the U.K. and the European Union. The failure of the sides to reach an agreement could lead to European equity volatility in the coming months.
