Quarterly Commentary as at December 31, 2017

The remarkable streak of both strong returns and historically low volatility continued in the fourth quarter, as the U.S. equity market outperformed its global developed market counterparts. With positive contributions from all sectors, the S&P 500 Index reached new record highs by the end of December, and a total of 62 new highs in 2017. Better-than-expected Q3 earnings announcements helped extend the latest rally, further fueled by investor expectations and the approval of U.S. tax reform. Market performance was led by the Consumer Discretionary sector, which derived considerable strength from internet retail sales over the holiday season. The second-strongest performer, Information Technology, continued its year-long ascent, while returns in the Utilities sector lagged the most.

In the Energy sector, a position in Xcel Energy held back the Fund's returns over the quarter. The Utilities Sector was also a detractor to performance, with a position in Consolidated Edison and having a negative impact during the period.

In the Information Technology, the Fund's overweight position in Texas Instruments added significantly to returns. A position in the Industrials sector also aided performance, with contributions from a holding in Republic Services.

Economic momentum in developed and emerging markets has shown little sign of slowing, and low inflation and accommodative monetary policies remain supportive. Synchronized global growth continues to be led by the U.S., whose central bank will likely continue with interest-rate hikes in 2018. U.S. tax cuts have the potential to maintain corporate earnings momentum. Steady and sustained expansion continues globally but political tensions remain a risk on the horizon.
