Quarterly Commentary as at March 31, 2018

After a strong start to the year, U.S. equity markets experienced a broad-based sell-off in February, driven by fears of inflation and rising Treasury yields on the back of a stronger labour market. Volatility remained elevated in March, given concerns of increased U.S. protectionism and a potential trade war with China. With U.S. weakness spreading across global markets, the S&P 500 Index in fact managed to end the quarter ahead of Canadian and global indices, but lagging behind emerging markets. Seven of 11 sectors ended in negative territory with Telecommunication Services leading the S&P 500's decline. Despite a late quarter sell-off, Information Technology managed to finish the quarter as the best relative performer while the Consumer Discretionary sector came in close second as it continued to draw strength from internet retail sales channels.

Holding back the Fund's returns during the quarter was a position in Procter & Gamble Co. as the company's share price depreciated after sluggish sales results. In the Consumer Staples sector, a position in Walmart Inc. hurt performance.

In the Information Technology sector, the Fund's position in Intuit Inc. added significantly to returns. The Consumer Discretionary sector has performed well, given the current economic environment, tight labour market and upward-trending wages. Supported by these factors, the second-largest contributor to Fund performance was TJX Companies Inc.

Earnings expectations and investor optimism are high as global synchronized growth continues in developed and emerging markets. Credit markets support economic growth as interest rates remain low internationally. More recently, protectionist trade moves by U.S. President Trump have shaken markets. An escalation of protectionist policy could accelerate inflation and likely stunt global growth.
