Quarterly Commentary as at September 30, 2017

Investors were on edge due to the rising tensions between the U.S. and North Korea that dominated the news cycle over the quarter; however this was offset by generally positive economic data out of the U.S., with strong gross domestic product figures contributing to performance and propelling near record highs. Strength this quarter came from the Information Technology sector, which continued its remarkable ascent following a strong start to the year. Elsewhere, the Consumer Discretionary and Consumer Staples sectors were the weakest performers due to slower earnings growth and the ongoing disruption of consumers' preference for online shopping and its effect on traditional brick-and-mortar businesses.

In the Utilities sector, a position in Consolidated Edison held back the Fund's returns. The Consumer Staples sector also weighed on performance, with a position in Pepsico having a negative impact during the period. In the Health Care sector, the Fund's overweight position in Gilead Sciences added significantly to returns. Contributions also came from Texas Instruments and Intel in the Information Technology sector.

Global growth has continued in developed and emerging markets. Many major economies around the world are operating close to full capacity. Monetary stimulus around the globe is beginning to be unwound yet inflation remains pacified. The current capital markets climate is encouraging for stocks although the business cycle is beginning to show signs of ageing. Fortunately, equity prices remain compelling the recent trend in growth will likely persist in the near term.
