Quarterly Commentary as at September 30, 2017

The global acceleration in economic growth that began last year has been largely sustained. The need for extreme monetary stimulus is fading and central banks including the U.S. Federal Reserve and the Bank of Canada are gradually shifting toward tighter policy.

The Fund's overweight position in equities and underweight position in fixed income had a positive impact on performance. Global equities posted gains, led by emerging-market and Canadian equities, as prices for oil and other commodities strengthened. The S&P 500 finished the period at a record high, but a weaker U.S. dollar offset most of the returns when translated back into Canadian dollars. Returns were boosted by exposure to the RBC Private Canadian Equity Pool, the RBC European Equity Fund and the Phillips, Hager & North Canadian Equity Underlying Fund.

Returns on global government bonds were low to slightly negative during the period. Canadian bonds underperformed after the Bank of Canada boosted short-term interest rates given faster-than-expected economic growth. The RBC Bond Fund had a negative impact on the Fund's returns, while performance was boosted by the RBC Global Corporate Bond Fund.

Our models continue to suggest the long-term direction for bond yields is higher, which would weigh on total returns for bond holders. Prospective returns for equities are much better than for fixed income, but the valuation tailwind from falling interest rates may be exhausted so earnings growth is now critical for the continuity of the bull market. The Fund has been dialing back the risk exposure in the asset mix as the business cycle matures, trimming the equity-overweight allocation and splitting the proceeds between cash and fixed income.
