Commentary as at September 30, 2019

The economic backdrop continued to soften during the third quarter of 2019 amid concerns that the U.S. would join Europe and emerging markets in posting weaker growth. The expansion was held back by manufacturing weakness, elevated uncertainty caused by the impact of protectionism and Brexit, fading fiscal stimulus and a slowing Chinese economy. In response to the uncertainty, major central banks loosened monetary policy.

The Fund’s overweight position in equities and underweight position in fixed income had a neutral impact on performance. Government-bond prices rose as major central banks indicated that they would lower interest rates in an effort to bolster flagging global economic growth. European bonds outperformed, with U.K. and Italian bonds performing particularly well while Japanese bonds underperformed. Returns in the fixed-income segment of the portfolio were boosted by the RBC Bond Fund and the RBC Global Corporate Bond Fund.

Equities posted modest gains against a deteriorating macroeconomic backdrop. North American stocks climbed, offsetting declines in emerging markets and a flat overall performance for global equities. Canadian stocks touched an all-time high during the period, driven by gold-mining equities and the Information Technology sector. Returns were bolstered by the RBC Canadian Dividend Fund and the RBC Private Canadian Equity Pool.

Financial markets face an evolving set of headwinds, and against this backdrop, central banks will continue to offer monetary support. While interest rates are likely to rise over time, bond yields could remain low or even be negative for many years. The portfolio manager continues to expect stocks to outperform bonds over the longer term and the Fund therefore remains overweight equities and underweight fixed income. The portfolio manager recently trimmed exposure to stocks by half a percentage point and moved the proceeds to cash.
