Quarterly Commentary as at September 30, 2018

European markets fell slightly during the quarter, although markets are just in positive territory year to date. Geo-political concerns continue to dominate headlines as well as market performance.

The long awaited Italian budget plans were published towards the end of the quarter which appeared to confirm market fears that the government's promise of increased fiscal spending will place the country at odds with Brussels. Meanwhile, Brexit negotiations suffered a blow as European leaders rejected the U.K's exit proposal during a summit in Salzburg. This increased uncertainty continues to hamper business confidence and economic growth in the U.K. as GDP growth fell to its lowest in six years.

European macro data continues to flat-line after declining during the first half of the year. From a valuation perspective, the market P/E is marginally richer than its long-term average whilst on a priceto-book basis, Europe continues to look cheap relative to the U.S. There has been a slight rotation into defensive styles and sectors over the quarter, such as Health Care and Consumer Staples.

At a sector level, our position in Energy was the standout positive contributor, whereas the position in Consumer Discretionary was an offsetting negative.

The largest individual contributor was our position in Gaztransport Et Technigaz, followed by the second-largest contributor, Novartis. The largest detractors were Playtech and Continental.

While we are, as always, cognizant of the wider macro environment, our focus remains on the discipline of long-term investing in companies with strong competitive positions, low capital intensity, sustainable and/or improving profitability.
