Quarterly Commentary as at March 31, 2018

Uncertainty returned to financial markets in early 2018 following a long period of strong returns and minimal volatility that lasted for most of the fiscal year. The reversal started with strong U.S. wage-growth data, which led to concerns that higher inflation may force the U.S. Federal Reserve to increase interest rates at a faster pace than previously anticipated. With markets beginning to find their feet in the latter stages of February, renewed concerns over U.S. trade protectionism resulted in additional volatility, starting with U.S. tariffs on steel and aluminum and continuing with Chinese threats in response.

Security selection detracted this quarter, but a few overweight positions performed well. PVH Corp. reported strong fiscal 2017 results with robust strength in its Calvin Klein and Tommy Hilfiger brands. ConocoPhillips Co., an independent oil and natural gas company, was also a strong performer over the period as management reaffirmed its targets of 7.5% dividend growth as well as increased the company's stock buyback program and long-term debt reduction. Conversely, not holding Amazon.com Inc. and Netflix was our largest detractor; however, the stocks lack characteristics conducive to a value mandate.

The economic backdrop remains positive by post-crisis standards as many macroeconomic indicators monitored by the portfolio managers show reasons to remain positive. While key risks of an aging business cycle, rising interest rates and protectionism persist, upside potential remains from structural reforms in Japan and U.S. fiscal stimulus. On balance, the portfolio managers expect the positives to outweigh the negatives, further driving potential in the stock market.
