Quarterly Commentary as at December 31, 2017

During Q4, stock selection continued to drive outperformance relative to the benchmark. The Health Care and Consumer Staples sectors were the leading contributors to Fund performance while the Materials and Consumer Discretionary detracted compared to the benchmark. The top absolute contributor was biopharmaceutical Sanbio Co., a leader in regenerative medicine for neurological disorders. Sanbio's share price surged on faster than expected patient enrolment for its clinical trial for chronic motor neurological issues caused by strokes, as well as receiving a grant from the California Institute of Regenerative Medicine. Kose, one of Japan's largest cosmetics and skincare companies, was the leading contributor in the consumer sectors as it continues to succeed in expanding its product portfolio and geographic footprint in Asia and North America.

On the other hand, our underweight position in Toyota has detracted from Fund performance, partially offset by our holding Suzuki Motor which has performed well on the back of continued strong performance by its franchise in India. The Fund continues to favor the Health Care and Telecommunication Services sectors while underweighting Industrials, and Materials.

On the economic front, Prime Minister Abe and Governor Kuroda are expected to continue to implement accommodative fiscal and monetary policies. The latest Tankan survey clearly indicates growing confidence among Japanese companies, as capacity shortage bodes well for capital expenditure in 2018. Japan continues to run close to full employment, with 2.8% unemployment amongst the lowest levels seen in 20 years. Despite tight labor conditions, wage growth remains disappointing. Nonetheless, inflation appears to be picking up, with consensus expecting 0.8% inflation in 2018.

While the domestic economy heads in the right direction, we have some concerns about external risks. The risk of U.S. protectionism and trade retaliation still exists while there remain some geopolitical risks from North Korea.
