Quarterly Commentary as at December 31, 2018

Punctuated by a brutal December, equity markets of all sizes and styles collapsed in the Q4, leading to the biggest annual declines for broad market indexes since the financial crisis. The Dow Jones Industrial Average (-8.7%) and the S&P 500 Index (-9.0%) both recorded their worst December performances since the Great Depression (1931). Perhaps most notable for the quarter and the year was the significant volatility experienced by markets. The S&P 500 increased or decreased more than 1% nine times in December, versus eight times in all of 2017. Impressively, the index moved that same amount 64 times over the course of the year. This was never more evident than late December, when the Dow lost a record 653 points on December 24th only to surge to its highest single day gain ever of more than 1,000 points when markets reopened on December 26th.

The Fund is slightly overweight Energy, modestly overweight Industrials, and has no holdings in the Communication Services sector. Adverse stock selection in the Financials, Materials, and Industrials sectors was the primary factor in the Fund's underperformance but was slightly offset by favorable stock selection within the Information Technology and Energy sectors. In terms of sector allocation decisions, the Fund's modest underweight to the Real Estate sector weighed on returns.

The Fund seeks to be invested in companies with attractive business fundamentals whose stocks are trading at a discount. Overall positioning of the portfolio is done primarily on a bottom-up basis with relative valuation gaps influencing portfolio construction within defined limits. The portfolio continues to be based on the premise that a diversified portfolio of companies with attractive return characteristics, opportunity for improvement, and low absolute and relative stock valuation metrics provide an attractive investment option and seek to avoid and at times exploit excesses that arise in both bear and bull markets.
