Quarterly Commentary as at March 31, 2017

The post-election equity market that reached record highs in 2016 continued in the new year. However, there was a stark shift in investment style performance as the darlings of 2016 – small-cap and value stocks, which were buoyed by post-election promises of tax reform, deregulation, and infrastructure stimulus – ceded performance leadership to large cap and growth stocks. This shift can partially be attributed to investors' realization that the new administration's proposed pro-growth policy changes will take time to incorporate, and are far from guaranteed.

Stock selection had an adverse impact on fund's performance. Stock selection in the Financials and Energy sectors weighed on returns and more than offset positive selection in the Consumer Discretionary and Health Care sectors. Overall sector allocation decisions were modestly positive with the Fund's overweight to the strong performing Information Technology sector boosting returns, while the significant overweight to Energy weighed on performance.

The Mid-Cap Value Strategy seeks to be invested in companies with attractive business fundamentals whose stocks are trading at a discount. The Portfolio continues to be based on the premise that a diversified portfolio of companies with attractive return characteristics, opportunity for improvement, and low absolute and relative stock valuation metrics provide an attractive investment option and seek to avoid and at times exploit excesses that arise in both bear and bull markets. To this end, recent market volatility has created attractive entry points for a number of new and existing holdings with portfolio positioning continuing to reflect holdings with superior return on equity and expected earnings growth while also trading at a discount on most valuation metrics.
