Quarterly Commentary as at March 31, 2017

Canadian bonds posted gains in the first quarter of 2017, reversing the trend in place since the election of Donald Trump as U.S. president in late 2016.

The shift in part reflected investor skepticism that the new administration would be able to deliver on Trump's promises to cut taxes, boost infrastructure spending and scale back business regulation. The Bank of Canada (BOC) left its benchmark interest rate unchanged, contrary to the U.S. Federal Reserve (Fed), which continued to press ahead with another rate cut late in the period.

The Fund's returns were aided by investments in the RBC Bond Fund, the PH&N Short Term Bond & Mortgage Fund, the PH&N Total Return Bond Fund and the RBC Global Corporate Bond Fund.

While the portfolio manager expects the BOC to keep its benchmark interest rate unchanged over the next 12 months, Governor Poloz is likely to emphasize downside risks and disappointment regarding exports. The Fed is expected to continue raising rates and could begin trimming the size of its balance sheet later this year. Canadian government yields will likely outperform their U.S. counterparts given that the BOC is likely to keep rates unchanged. The portfolio manager is maintaining overweight positions in corporate and provincial bonds, as the additional yields offered by these securities would help offset capital losses as yields rise.
