Quarterly Commentary as at June 30, 2017

The Fund slightly lagged its benchmark – the S&P/TSX Capped Composite Index – this quarter as well as year to date.

Sleep Country Canada continues to perform well based on successful execution of their store expansion plans and news that a major competitor has encountered financial trouble. Boyd Group Income Fund rose after announcing an acquisition in the Ontario market, which provides the opportunity to double the size of their Canadian footprint. CCL Industries benefitted from continued cost savings by integrating Checkpoint, and was added to the S&P TSX 60 Index during the quarter. Quebecor rose after selling non-Quebec spectrum holdings to Rogers Communications and Shaw Cable. Dollarama reported strong quarterly results and once again increased their long-term store build target. Finally, Blackline Safety, an emerging manufacturer of gas detection and worker safety devices, appreciated as exciting new product launches came to fruition.

Our energy exposure has been a significant short-term drag on performance, as oil prices declined due to persistently high inventories and resilient North American shale growth. We continue to expect a recovery as oil prices are below levels required to sustain long-term production requirements. Home Capital's share price fell significantly after a series of negative headlines damaged both depositor and investor confidence. We exited our position. Badger Daylighting declined sharply as first quarter margins came in below expectations. We expect this issue to be transitory, as costs are unusually high when the company invests in future growth, and market conditions are improving. Element Fleet declined due to disclosure of credit exposure to a distressed trucking company. Once again we see this issue as short term in nature and not material to long-term value creation.

The Fund remains focused on high-quality, well-managed, growth-oriented companies. These industry leaders have performed well in most stock market environments.
