Quarterly Commentary as at December 31, 2017

The U.S. Federal Reserve (Fed) continued its hiking cycle this quarter, raising the federal funds rate by 0.25% to end the year at a range of 1.25% to 1.50% as economic data continued to show labour market strength and healthy growth in economic activity. Along with this, the Fed also reiterated the data-dependent nature of its future monetary policy moves. As we head into 2018, market expectations are for the Fed to follow a similar pace as in 2017 with another two to three rate hikes through 2018. As the Fed continues to move toward a more normalized monetary policy, we expect short-term interest rates in the United States to follow suit, which should translate into higher reinvestment rates for investors going forward.

PH&N $U.S. Money Market Fund's strategy going forward continues to be focused on preserving capital while maximizing yield by investing in high-quality securities that pay an incremental yield over and above what is available from U.S. Government T-bills. To this end, the Fund is predominantly invested in corporate securities, such as asset-backed commercial paper, banker's acceptances and commercial paper of high-quality corporate borrowers as well as, to a lesser extent, the USD-denominated debt of Canadian provinces as these securities continue to provide attractive risk-adjusted incremental yield. As always, safety of principal and return of capital is not compromised and remains the primary objective of the Fund.
