Quarterly Commentary as at June 30, 2017

The Fund enjoyed another strong quarter, with the final result masking the intra-period volatility as yields were on the decline during most of the quarter before increasing considerably at quarter end. The Fund entered the second quarter cautiously positioned with a modest short duration compared to its benchmark (the Fund was positioned for interest rates to rise), and then became even shorter as interest rates declined. This strategy was modestly helpful to performance when rates rebounded toward the end of the quarter.

On the credit side, our view remained cautious. As credit spreads continued to tighten throughout the quarter, we reduced the Fund's modest overweight position in corporate bonds to a neutral position. Provincial bonds were also reduced to a modest overweight position versus the benchmark by the end of the quarter. The small size of these positions and relative calm in credit markets this quarter meant that these strategies were neutral to relative performance. We would like to see better valuations (i.e., higher yield spreads) in these sectors in order to take more meaningful positions. In the meantime, we are content with being patient.

We also engaged in out-of-benchmark strategies in the Fund, including small positions in inflation-linked bonds, U.S. Treasuries, and maple bonds (U.S. companies that issue bonds in Canada in Canadian dollars). These strategies help diversify the portfolio in sectors where we see opportunities to outperform traditional Canadian bonds, and were moderately helpful to performance.
