Quarterly Commentary as at September 30, 2017

Third quarter performance of the Canadian bond market was quite weak. The Bank of Canada raised rates for the first time in seven years in July, and again at the next meeting in September. The market was concerned that this marked the beginning of policy normalization with steady increases anticipated and pushed yields higher, approximately 80 basis points in the 2 and 5 year maturities. Near the end of the quarter Governor Stephen Poloz assured the market that further moves would be data dependant and that there was no predetermined path for interest rates.

In the U.S., yields were also higher for the quarter, reversing the rally in August and early September. The rally had been driven by a mix of safe-haven concerns such as domestic politics, fear of a government shut-down, North Korea standoff, and also concerns about the economic impact from hurricanes. Later in the month a new tax reform proposal added to growth expectations also pushing yields higher.

Looking ahead, bond yields are expected to rise, the market has penciled in rate hikes late in the fourth quarter. In addition, the U.S. Federal Reserve has begun the lengthy process of shrinking its portfolio of Treasury and mortgage notes on the balance sheet; this slow measured manner should not disrupt fixed-income markets.
