Quarterly Commentary as at September 30, 2018

The accelerating U.S. economy and trade were the big stories in the third quarter of 2018. Concern that Canada would be omitted from a renegotiated trade pact between the U.S. and Mexico were alleviated at the end of the period, with the announcement of an agreement. The U.S. raised pressure on China to open up its economy, but by quarter-end there was scant evidence that the conflict had done much to hinder the U.S. economic expansion.

Global equities were mixed during the quarter, with the S&P 500 Index rising to an all-time high while many other markets posted negative returns. The performance of emerging markets was especially negative given the trade tensions and a relatively strong U.S. dollar. Returns were bolstered by the TD U.S. Mid-Cap Growth Fund and the AGF American Growth Class.

Economic growth is strong in the U.S., but many other economies are slowing. Protectionism and Chinese economic deceleration are among the risks threatening the solid, albeit moderating, growth. While we expect continued expansion, the slowdown has led us to lower our developed-world growth forecasts.

Our analysis of a variety of scenarios suggests that stocks can deliver decent upside with reasonable assumptions, as long as earnings continue to come through as analysts expect. We recognize, however, that given the late stage in the business cycle and the fact that valuations are above equilibrium, earnings growth is now critical to sustaining the bull market in stocks.
