Quarterly Commentary as at March 31, 2017

Emerging markets (EM) bonds outperformed high yield bonds and rebounded from a weak fourth quarter as investor optimism related to Trump's fiscal and protectionist policies began to wane. Narrowing spreads for EM bonds were the key contributor to the strong positive returns for the quarter. With Trump having a difficult time implementing his pre-election promises, investor concerns over his protectionist policies and the potential implications on EM countries diminished.

High yield bonds broadly outperformed U.S. Treasuries. Monetary conditions in the United States remain easy, the economy is growing, the deflationary "Trump" trade remains a possibility, credit conditions are benign, corporate health is stabilizing, commodity prices are firmer and the corporate default rate is falling. These key supports continued to drive credit spreads lower and prices higher, causing valuations to reach levels not seen since mid-2014.

The Fund benefited from an overweight allocation to EM bonds and underweight in U.S. high-yield debt for most of the quarter. We started 2017 with a slight underweight to EM bonds, but added to EM sovereigns and trimmed the allocation to U.S. high yield debt early in the quarter as the relative momentum of U.S. high yield bonds began to fade.

Global growth remains a concern, however pro-growth policies, demand for yield, firm commodity prices and stabilizing corporate health should continue to provide support for corporate and EM credit. In this environment, and with the risk of rising rates, we feel that EM and high yield corporate bonds continue to represent attractive relative value compared to other fixed income assets. However, it is likely that future returns will be lower than those experienced in the recent past.
