Quarterly Commentary as at March 31, 2017

Global economic growth firmed, with a pickup in the Eurozone starting to factor into the expansion. In March, the U.S. Federal Reserve boosted its benchmark interest rate for the second time in three months, reflecting optimism about the expansion. However, longer-term U.S. bond yields fell late in the period on concern that President Trump might have trouble winning approval for his proposed economic reforms.

Major equity markets rose, led by Europe and emerging markets, amid optimism that economies around the world were gathering momentum. Investments that contributed positively to performance included the RBC European Equity Fund, the RBC Emerging Markets Equity Fund, the PH&N U.S. Multi-Style All-Cap Equity Fund and the RBC QUBE U.S. Equity Fund.

Leading economic indicators are at their best levels in several years, economic surprises have been overwhelmingly positive and profits continue to recover. As a result, risk assets have performed well. Although stocks have enjoyed a solid rally, we don't think that valuations are as stretched as some investors believe once we factor in current levels of inflation, interest rates and corporate profitability. However, a continued improvement in earnings is needed to fuel further equity gains. Fortunately, a recovery in profits is well underway. While there are risks that some of Trump's protectionist policies could have a negative impact on earnings, significant gains are also possible if large-scale corporate-tax cuts materialize and the economy accelerates. We continue to believe that long-term expected returns for stocks remain attractive.
