Quarterly Commentary as at September 30, 2018

Short-term domestic bond yields trended higher over the quarter, leaving absolute returns for the Fund broadly flat. We entered the quarter slightly shorter than the benchmark in anticipation of short-term rates rising as central banks transition to more conventional monetary policies. We tactically reduced our short position over the quarter to lock in profits as yields move higher. Overall, the Fund ended the quarter with a duration profile slightly longer than that of the benchmark.

We continue to have a cautious view when it comes to credit strategies. The Fund's close-to-benchmark position in corporate bonds was maintained over the quarter as we wait to capitalize on more compelling reward-for-risk opportunities, should they emerge. In government credit, we continue to prefer federal government agency bonds and government-guaranteed mortgage-backed securities (MBS) over provincial bonds.

The Fund's major out-of-benchmark strategy remains in place, with an important allocation to commercial mortgages. This continues to offer an attractive yield in a sector that we understand well and where we have a long track record of conservatively investing. Our mortgage allocation was the primary driver of value added over the quarter.
