Quarterly Commentary as at September 30, 2018

The high-yield market continued to perform well this quarter, despite rising government bond yields, turmoil in emerging markets and recurring global trade tensions. A renewed risk appetite was in part responsible for the positive performance. As well, limited new issuance supply balanced against steady demand provided key support.

The Fund generated positive absolute and relative returns this quarter. Spreads continued to inch tighter and ended September near cycle lows at 3.3%, and the spread differential between high yield and investment grade bonds remains far below long-term averages. This leaves prices fairly vulnerable - particularly if we are in the late stages of the credit and business cycles, as some indicators suggest.

In response to this challenging environment, we have taken steps to reduce risk in the Fund. We have increased our allocation to cash and near-cash substitutes. We have also reduced duration and increased credit quality. We continue to hold core positions with decent running yield that should contribute to returns. We also have a few opportunistic holdings.

Despite our cautious outlook, we believe that there is inherent value in an asset class that can deliver 4-5% returns with lower volatility and low duration. This is especially true in a rising interest rate environment. The Fund's lower risk and short duration profile may constrain returns in the short term, but we believe this unique structure will provide liquidity, protect capital and generate reasonable risk-adjusted returns in the potentially challenging market conditions ahead.
