Quarterly Commentary as at June 30, 2017

With the notable exception of the UK, much of the political uncertainty that has dominated the headlines over the last 12 months appears to be receding. Against this more settled backdrop, global equities continued to perform well during the second quarter, with earnings resolutely strong. Bond yields have remained at historically low levels and the U.S. dollar has been weak. Both of these factors have added impetus to the search for high-quality businesses with predictable and growing earnings. Towards the end of the quarter, however, several of the world's largest central banks hinted at policy tightening.

Indian financial company HDFC Bank was the largest contributor to Fund returns as its share price continued to rally. Intuit, the U.S. developer of personal and small business accounting software, was the second-biggest contributor, as concerns abated over lower levels of U.S. tax filing, and optimism rose regarding the potential benefits that the gig economy will give to personal accounting tool providers. U.S.-domiciled alternative asset manager, Blackstone, was the third-largest contributor to returns in the Fund.

TJX, the U.S. discount retailer, was the biggest detractor from performance during the quarter. Traditional U.S. retail is under threat from online alternatives, and shopping mall traffic is falling. EOG Resources, the U.S. onshore oil producer, was the second-biggest detractor as its share price has suffered from falling oil prices. Core Laboratories, a U.S. oil services company, also detracted on the back of weak oil prices.

We remain committed to discovering companies that we believe will be successful in the future. We are constantly searching for compelling long-term opportunities at the right valuations while avoiding businesses that are overvalued or optically cheap but fundamentally flawed.
