Quarterly Commentary as at September 30, 2017

The largest contributor was our off-benchmark holding in Chinese internet giant, Tencent, and Chilean copper miner, Antofagasta, was the second largest. The biggest detractor was our position in Japan Tobacco. At the stock selection level, our holdings in the Industrials and Energy sectors detracted the most from relative performance, while strong stock selection in the Health Care and Information Technology sectors contributed.

From an asset allocation perspective, Health Care was the biggest detractor from relative returns while Utilities contributed to performance.

Asian markets posted robust gains following strong first half performance. Investor sentiment improved on the back of the region's rising earnings expectations and stabilizing economic indicators coming from China. The strongest performing markets in Asia were China, Hong Kong and Thailand, and the Indian market has also fared well. The Japanese economy continued to gain strength in recent months and the Prime Minister called a surprise election for October 2017 as his approval ratings improved. The market seems to have shrugged off the negative news around North Korea's military provocations but there are some warning signs for Asian markets as we have seen some softening of macro indicators in the region.

European equities continued the strong performance seen earlier this year, attributed to a turnaround in September when they posted the largest monthly gain since December 2016. For much of the quarter the expectation of higher monetary policy pushed up the euro, however it later lost its momentum after the European Central Bank's announcement that it would leave interest rates unchanged and maintain quantitative easing measures. Angela Merkel's failure to win a majority in the German general election also weakened the euro. The encouraging macro data and latest set of solid corporate results suggest a strong recovery in Europe, however the ongoing UK-EU Brexit negotiations, and political developments in southern Europe in the months ahead could lead to market volatility.
