Quarterly Commentary as at June 30, 2017

Security selection was the main driver of outperformance as asset allocation was flat.

From an asset allocation perspective, our underweight position in Energy was the biggest contributor as the sector ended Q2 on a weakness. The underweight position in Financials detracted from relative performance.

At the security selection level, our holdings in the Financials and Industrials sectors contributed the most to relative performance. The largest contributor was our off benchmark position in Tencent, which delivered an exceptionally strong quarterly result driven by strength in its core gaming business. The most significant detractor was an overweight position in Sysmex.

Asian markets have generated strong returns given a positive economic and political backdrop, with Indonesia receiving a ratings upgrade from S&P, a new president elected in South Korea and China easing monetary conditions by injecting liquidity into the system. Further, solid economic data in the U.S. and the fading concerns of a detrimental trade policy from the Trump administration should continue to boost investor sentiment in Asia.

European Equities delivered positive returns during Q2 although these were muted by a negative June. One interpretation of June's market movement is that it is the beginning of the second wave of a value rally. The other is that the dip in the last week of June was a sympathy move with bond markets. The economic backdrop in the Eurozone, nevertheless, remains robust with broad-based growth. In contrast, economic figures reported from the UK showed a potential slowdown as the manufacturing, services and construction sectors stalled due to increasing business uncertainty.
