Quarterly Commentary as at March 31, 2018

Uncertainty returned to financial markets in early 2018 following a long period of strong returns and minimal volatility that lasted for most of the fiscal year. The reversal started with strong U.S. wage-growth data, which led to concerns that higher inflation may force the U.S. Federal Reserve to increase interest rates at a faster pace than previously anticipated. With markets beginning to find their feet in the latter stages of February, renewed concerns over U.S. trade protectionism resulted in additional volatility.

The valuation of the S&P/TSX Composite Index is currently around two multiple points lower than the S&P 500 Index, a gap that seems justified, given the concerns outlined above and the fact that the Financials and Energy sectors account for more than half of the Canadian market's earnings.

Security selection was a positive contributor to performance this quarter, particularly in Canada's two largest sectors, Financials and Energy. In Canada, energy producers have not benefited as much from the oil rally due to pipeline bottlenecks and the resulting pricing discounts for Canadian heavy crude. Our overweight positions in Canadian Natural Resources Ltd. and Imperial Oil Ltd. detracted from performance while our overweight in Husky Energy Inc. contributed positively as the company beat on earnings and reinstated its dividend.

The economic backdrop remains positive by post-crisis standards as many macroeconomic indicators monitored by the portfolio managers show reasons to remain positive. While key risks of an aging business cycle, rising interest rates and protectionism persist, upside potential remains from structural reforms in Japan and U.S. fiscal stimulus. On balance, the portfolio managers expect the positives to outweigh the negatives, further driving potential in the stock market.
