Quarterly Commentary as at March 31, 2017

Global government bond yields settled down after the move caused by Trump's election victory. U.S. 10-year Treasury yield finished at levels it started. Bond investors stayed calm after the Fed hiked its policy rates in March. U.S. Treasuries delivered a 0.5% total return in Q1.

The upcoming French Presidential election heightened political uncertainty in Europe and resurfaced EMU break-up fears resulting in the underperformance of French, Belgian and Italian government bonds. Economic growth and inflationary pressures continued to gain upward momentum, prompting speculation that the ECB may reduce its monetary accommodation sooner, which pushed bond yields higher across Europe. Longer-maturity bonds suffered bigger losses than their short-maturity peers. The Fund's underweight of longer-maturity and French and Belgian bonds contributed to performance.

The Fund's credit allocation also added to performance. Higher risk corporate and EM debt continued to outperform government bonds by offering higher income and capital appreciation in Q1. Demand for these securities remained strong, supported by the better than expected economic data. In Q1, as credit bonds extended their gains, we reduced holdings cognizant of reduced potential for further gains.

We expect volatility of global bonds to pick up in coming quarters. The Fed expects to continue raising policy rates and could also start reducing its balance sheet later this year adding upward pressure to global bond yields. Bond yields could also face renewed upward pressure from the eventual arrival of U.S. fiscal stimulus, tax and regulatory reforms. The rising yield pressures should be moderated by the BoJ and ECB accommodative monetary policies. Any events that spark a surge in yields would provide opportunities to accumulate bonds that compound income at higher rates.
