Quarterly Commentary as at March 31, 2019

U.S. equities pivoted off their Christmas Eve lows, recovering most of the declines recorded in the second half of 2018. Stocks moved steadily upward, driven by the U.S. Federal Reserve's pivot to a more dovish monetary outlook, the end of the U.S. government shutdown and indications of progress on trade issues between the U.S. and China. All 11 sectors in the S&P 500 Index posted gains during the quarter, with Information Technology leading the way, followed by Real Estate and Industrials. The quarter's returns brought the U.S. equity market to within a few percentage points of its all-time high, recorded in September 2018.

The fund underperformed its benchmark, the Russell 3000 Index, during the quarter, due to adverse sector allocation. Stock selection also was a drag on performance, particularly in the Information Technology and Consumer Discretionary sectors.

Looking forward, the U.S. profit outlook for the rest of 2019 may be challenged by the absence of further tax cuts and slower economic growth. However, moderate inflation and accommodative monetary policy should provide support for equities. In addition, the portfolio manager is mindful of U.S.-China trade negotiations and rising geopolitical concerns. For now, the global economy should continue to expand fast enough to support stocks in the short term, but, in the view of the portfolio manager, the intermediate-term outlook is less certain.
