Quarterly Commentary as at March 31, 2019

Emerging Markets equities posted a strong recovery in Q1 2019, following a challenging 2018.

China continues to be a key driver of performance, with the CSI 300 index of stocks listed in Shanghai and Shenzhen up over +30% over the quarter. Colombia was another top performer, posting a strong recovery from last year. Turkey was one of the few markets in EM to finish the quarter in negative territory. After a strong recovery in January, Turkey's equity and currency markets weakened as concerns resurfaced relating to president Erdogan's unorthodox approach to managing the economy. At the sector level, all sectors delivered a positive return over the quarter.

The biggest contributor to relative returns was our holding Softbank. Softbank's share price strengthened after the company announced a USD5.5bn share buyback which will be funded by proceeds from Softbank's recent sale of 37% of its domestic telecommunications business. Asian insurer AIA Group's share price appreciated alongside a broader recovery in Asia equity markets and was also bolstered by the strong value of new business growth led by China. Chilean copper miner Antofagasta also contributed after reporting strong Q4 results and benefitting from a recovery in copper prices.

The biggest detractor from relative returns was Alibaba as the company's share price rebounded strongly amid a broader recovery in China, and China tech in particular. We have sold out of Alibaba as we have concerns regarding its corporate governance and accounting practices. Hero MotoCorp also detracted as the company reported mixed quarterly results on the back of increased competitive intensity and GST implementation and liquidity tightening. HDFC detracted after its share price declined alongside broader weakness in India equity markets amid uncertainty relating to the upcoming presidential elections.
