Quarterly Commentary as at March 31, 2019

The S&P/TSX Composite Index bounced back substantially during the first quarter of 2019 and finished slightly ahead of other global markets in Canadian dollar terms. Strength throughout the quarter can primarily be attributed to a more dovish tone from central banks and higher domestic oil prices.

Throughout the quarter, relative performance of the fund was driven by security selection, highlighted by names within the Utilities sector. In this regard, an overweight position in TransAlta was the largest driver of relative outperformance in the fund. The stock price of the Calgary-based utility company advanced after it posted strong financial results and struck a deal with Brookfield Asset Management that involved an investment of $750 million. The fund also benefitted from an overweight position in ATS Automation Tooling Systems after the company reported strong earnings results.

In contrast, security selection within the Energy sector weakened relative performance. Specifically, an overweight position in Canadian oil sands producer MEG Energy was a drag on the fund as the company's share price fell during the quarter following news that Husky Energy had withdrawn its hostile takeover bid after less than two-thirds of MEG Energy's shareholders had tendered to it.

Looking forward, a challenging domestic environment for the production and transport of crude oil, and concerns surrounding the health of the Canadian consumers remain as Canada-specific headwinds. However, with the broad Canadian equity market trading at a discount to the S&P 500 Index, we currently view Canada as a good place to pick up income at attractive valuations.
