Quarterly Commentary as at June 30, 2017

The S&P/TSX Composite Total Return Index pared gains after hitting an all-time high in February. Underperformance stemmed from weakness in the Materials, Financials and Energy sectors, representing approximately two-thirds of Canada's benchmark stock index.

During Q2, security selection in the Materials and Financials sectors was the primary contributor to relative performance. In materials, the exclusion of Barrick Gold aided returns as the company faces sanctions in Argentina and an export ban in Africa. In Financials, Brookfield Asset Management experienced strength after Q2 results that exceeded expectations.

Conversely, the Energy sector was the largest detractor during Q2. While the broad based commodity shock has subsided, oil prices continue to be under pressure. They remain difficult to forecast and below our estimate of marginal cost. We continue to believe that large companies with long-life reserves and strong balance sheets are set to deliver attractive levels of free cash as crude prices return to the marginal cost of production.

The large Canadian banks delivered strong earnings growth this quarter, driven by healthy loan growth, stable net-interest margins and declining provisions for credit losses. Although bank stocks pulled back amid concerns around the housing market and news flow around mortgage lender Home Capital Group, they continue to offer investors attractive yield and growth characteristics.

Despite a slower Q2, the Canadian economy has had a strong start to 2017. Global economic growth is expected to trend modestly higher this year and our forecast has increased to 2.0% for Canada.
