Quarterly Commentary as at March 31, 2017

The first quarter of the year saw a steady rise in global stocks, as measured by the MSCI World Index. Leadership for the first two months was from North American markets - the United States and Canada. In March, it was the international markets, represented by the EAFE Index which carried the advance.

The MSCI World Index rose 5.8%. During the first part of the quarter, stocks rose in anticipation of market friendly Trump policies being enacted and a patient U.S. Federal Reserve in terms of interest rate increases. As doubts began to emerge on both of those fronts, an increase in global growth prospects and a better value proposition shifted the stock leadership to the international markets. The Fund's performance relative to its benchmark benefitted from being overweight stocks and underweight bonds.

Global sovereign bond yields were little changed, resulting in a relatively small total return. Corporate bond spreads were again tighter though, showing a more meaningful total return. The Fund maintained a moderate underweight of bonds, along with an overweight of stocks. The stock allocation was modestly reduced over the quarter as some gains were harvested.

The outlook has not changed much from what was presented at the end of last year. This commentary has been steadfastly supportive for stocks for some time. Nonetheless, global stocks may become more susceptible to a correction later this year if the growth prospects that the markets are embedding don't materialize. Correspondingly, interest rates will have only limited upside under the above scenario. Rates in the U.S should have a difficult time rising without participation on the upside from European and Japanese rates.
