Quarterly Commentary as at September 30, 2017

The Fund's top contributors on an absolute basis for Q3 were ABIOMED, H. B. Fuller and Concho Resources. The worst performing stocks for Q3 were Henry Schein and Cooper Companies. Overall, adverse stock selection and sector allocation headwinds weighed on returns. Poor stock selection in the Industrials and Information Technology sectors more than offset favorable stock selection in the Health Care and Consumer Discretionary sectors. The Fund's moderate overweight to the relatively poor performing Health Care sector detracted the most from a sector allocation standpoint. The Fund's largest overweighted sectors versus the index are Health Care and Industrials, while the largest underweighted sectors are Consumer Discretionary and Materials. The Fund owned 80 stocks as of quarter end with six new stocks added to the Fund in Q3.

The U.S. economy appears to be on solid footing, with good potential for acceleration, as reflected in recent ISM Manufacturing PMI data, the low unemployment rate, and high consumer and business confidence figures. However, the uncertainty surrounding the implementation of any of the Trump administration's supportive fiscal policy measures such as health care reform, tax reform, and infrastructure spending is impacting the pace and size of the future economic growth. From a stock perspective, valuations in U.S. markets are clearly rich as major indices continue to hit all-time highs. The opportunity for price/earnings multiple expansion to drive market advancement is limited, so prospective market gains will be largely reliant on corporate earnings growth. We continue to remain cautiously optimistic about U.S. economic growth. Our investment process leads us to invest in companies with limited exposure to macro-economic risks and we believe that this should enable the Fund to successfully navigate through any increase in market volatility.
