Quarterly Commentary as at December 31, 2017

Positive returns were driven by strong stock selection while sector allocation headwinds weighed modestly on returns. Favorable stock selection within the Information Technology and Consumer Discretionary sectors contributed the most to returns and offset adverse stock selection within the Industrials and Consumer Staples sectors. Overall, sector allocation decisions had a neutral impact on returns.

The Fund's largest overweighted sectors versus the index are Health Care and Industrials, while the largest underweighted sectors are Consumer Discretionary and Materials. The Fund owned 80 stocks as of quarter end. Over the fourth quarter, one new stock was added to the Fund: Teledyne Technologies, Inc. along with one stock that was liquidated: PAREXEL International Corp.

Heading into 2018, the fundamentals underlying the U.S. economy continue to improve. Both business and consumer confidence are already at high levels and the passage of the tax reform bill will likely accelerate overall gross domestic product growth (GDP) in 2018 from current rates. GDP should also be further bolstered by deregulation and improving international economic growth. While the administration believes that the tax bill will increase employee wages and increase consumer spending, we also believe it will spur additional corporate capital expenditure spending and result in increased dividend growth, share buybacks, and merger and acquisition activity. Keeping the potential risks in mind, we are positive on equity markets heading into the New Year and don't foresee a near term catalyst that has the potential to significantly derail this long-running bull market.
