Quarterly Commentary as at March 31, 2018

Equity markets faced a challenging quarter, given macroeconomic concerns about inflation, higher interest rates and trade tensions that threatened to overshadow the strength of the underlying economy and solid company fundamentals. Heading into 2018, despite reasonably high expectations of continued strong results from Q4 into Q1, investors reverted to a more defensive posture. However, these fears appear overblown as there are several catalysts in place to fuel the U.S. economy that we believe should spur further acceleration in economic growth.

Stock selection within the Consumer Discretionary and Industrials sectors detracted the most from returns, more than offsetting favourable stock selection within the Energy sector. From a sector-allocation standpoint, the Fund's modest underweight to the Energy sector boosted returns, but the moderate underweight to Health Care weighed on performance.

The Fund's strategy focuses on neglected small-cap companies with attractive long-term fundamentals, near-term profitability improvement potential and low relative valuations. The strategy emphasizes market leaders with proven products or services, sustainable competitive advantages, solid balance sheets and attractive cash flows. While sector weightings are a result of bottom-up research and stock selection, the strategy remains positioned for economic recovery. Downside protection is sought through the portfolio's superior return on equity (ROE) and balance sheet profile compared to the index and market leadership positions of most portfolio companies. The strategy continues to trade at a valuation discount to the Russell 2000 Value Index on several measures while providing superior projected earnings growth and ROE.
