Quarterly Commentary as at March 31, 2018

European equities fell during the quarter as volatility returned to markets after strong performance in 2017.

Markets around the globe felt the effects of a rise in protectionist policies, resulting in fears of a trade war emanating from the United States. This was accompanied by signs of a slowdown in European economic growth. The positive economic growth predicted for 2018 has not materialized so far, resulting in a reversal of the cyclical stock momentum as investors revert to more defensive sectors.

The Italian elections in early March yielded no clear victor as the Five Star Movement became the single largest party with 32% of the vote. The Lega Nord party eclipsed Silvio Berlusconi's Forza Italia by winning 17% of the vote, leaving the country to form a coalition government.

At a sector level, all sectors posted negative returns with Telecommunication Services the deepest in the red. Defensive sectors rallied in March with Utilities, Consumer Staples and Health Care all posting positive returns, but were down overall during the quarter.

The best-performing stocks in the portfolio were Irish airline, Ryanair DAC, and London Stock Exchange Group plc while Irish bookmaker, Paddy Power Betfair plc, and software publishing company, Sage Group plc, were the largest drags on performance.

Significant competing headwinds and tailwinds remain as valuation polarization and political instability compete with positive earnings per share and GDP forecasts, although these tend to be lagging indicators. Question marks remain over the final composition of the Italian government and the ability of French President Macron to push through his labour reforms. However, our focus remains on the discipline of long-term investing in companies with strong competitive positions, low capital intensity, sustainable and/or improving profitability.
