Quarterly Commentary as at June 30, 2017

During Q2 the U.S. stock market continued to move higher. Economic and corporate earnings results sustained their trend upward, albeit with less enthusiasm exhibited during the quarter prior. The U.S. stock market continues to make progress as corporate earnings results remain strong. However, the country's economic growth prospects have shown some signs of weakening over the quarter as interest rates and inflation recently moved lower.

In the Information Technology sector, the Fund's overweight position in Alphabet Inc. added significantly to returns. The Industrials sector also aided performance, with contributions from holdings in 3M Company and Honeywell

International. In the Consumer Staples sector, a position in Procter & Gamble held back the Fund's returns. The Telecommunication Services sector also weighed on performance, with positions in AT&T and Verizon holding back returns during the period.

The investor optimism that followed the U.S. election last November has faded somewhat with the realization that economic-policy changes under the Trump administration will take longer than anticipated to implement. As a result, the global economic outlook has worsened slightly in recent months.
