Quarterly Commentary as at June 30, 2017

The Canadian equity market continued to deliver feeble returns over Q2 due to weak performance in the Materials and Energy sectors. Slumping oil prices over the quarter continue to hurt Canadian stock prices as the market continues to be underwhelmed by OPEC's production cuts. Commodity stocks also plummeted during the period given the downward pressure in the price of iron ore and other metals.

In the Industrials sector, the Fund's overweight position in CAE added significantly to returns. The Telecommunication Services sector also aided performance, with a large contribution from a holding in Telus. In the Energy sector, positions in Imperial Oil and Peyto Exploration and Development held back the Fund's returns. The Real Estate sector also weighed on performance, with a position in Riocan REIT holding back returns during the period.

The investor optimism that followed the U.S. election last November has faded somewhat with the realization that economic-policy changes under the Trump administration will take longer than anticipated to implement. As a result, the global economic outlook has worsened slightly in recent months.
