Quarterly Commentary as at March 31, 2018

Equity markets faced a challenging quarter, given macroeconomic concerns about inflation, higher interest rates and trade tensions that threatened to overshadow the strength of the underlying economy and solid company fundamentals. Heading into 2018, despite reasonably high expectations of continued strong results from Q4 into Q1, investors reverted to a more defensive posture. However, these fears appear overblown as there are several catalysts in place to fuel the U.S. economy that we believe should spur further acceleration in economic growth.

The Fund outperformed its Russell Midcap Value benchmark for the quarter, driven by strong stock selection. Stock selection within the Health Care, Financials and Energy sectors was the largest contributor to performance, more than outweighing adverse stock selection within the Industrials and Consumer Discretionary sectors.

From a sector-allocation standpoint, the moderate overweight to the relatively strong Information Technology sector boosted returns.

The Fund's strategy seeks to be invested in companies with attractive business fundamentals whose stocks are trading at a discount. Overall positioning of the portfolio is done primarily on a bottom-up basis with relative valuation gaps influencing portfolio construction within defined limits. The portfolio continues to be based on the premise that a diversified portfolio of companies with attractive return characteristics, opportunity for improvement as well as low absolute and relative stock valuation metrics provide an attractive investment option and seek to avoid and, at times, exploit excesses that arise in both bear and bull markets.
